Colored stones
make a comeback
at LOLA Jewelry.

Sparkle Plenty

Stacey Vance's bridal bling dazzles with its distinctive rock-chick-meets-renaissance vibe. As a partner in LOLA (Lots of Little Accessories), the jewelry designer showers brides with abundant attention to create one-of-a-kind pieces. From her Crescent Court studio, she fashions rings, necklaces, bracelets and earrings. While she does adore diamonds, Vance admits to a preference for colored gems, which are making a big-time comeback in the bridal marketplace. "I like yellow gold with colored stones, but I usually go with white gold or platinum with diamonds," she says. Vance and LOLA co-owner Kim Wilson also have collection pieces starting at a price-savvy $400. Behold the array of seasonal bijoux at lolajewelry.com. —Lisa Martin
